A variational model for relativistic electrons

I will present a variational model from relativistic quantum mechanics, involving the Dirac operator. The theory allows to describe the state of N electrons (for instance in an atom or a molecule). But uncommon effects like the polarization of the vacuum or the spontaneous creation of electron-positron pairs can also be described.